INTRODUCTION

As part of the World Union of World Healing Societies' mission to improve wound care globally through collaboration, education and evidence-based practice, I am delighted to launch the WUWHS Regional Congress Series.

Following our long history of highly successful global congresses, we will be launching WUWHS Regional Congresses in Singapore, Buenos Aires and Cape Town in 2027.

While our global congress will continue to lead the way in delivering our overarching vision, these new events will allow us to tailor content to more specific regulatory, cultural and commercial dynamics. They will also create more frequent engagement with both front-line professionals and our industry colleagues.

Crucially, these events will also improve accessibility and participation. Not all stakeholders can attend our global congress due to cost, travel or time constraints. Our regional congresses lower these barriers, enabling more clinicians, policy-makers and business leaders to engage, network and contribute.

While we are of course happy to engage with regional and national industry teams directly, we hope that our valued colleagues in global teams will also see value in working with us on our regional congresses, and we'd be grateful if you could review this document and give as much feedback as you can to James Hopwood, Client Relationship Director at OmniaMed Communications, who are the primary congress organisers (PCOs) for the WUWHS Regional Congress Series.

Kind regards,

Professor Dato Dr Harikrishna K. Nair,
President and Congress Organising Chairman,
World Union of Wound Healing Societies
(WUWHS)

CORPORATE PACKAGES

Corporate sponsors have a unique opportunity to communicate their strategy and product information directly to their target group: nurses, doctors and other healthcare professionals working with an interest in wound care.

Each event will see a minimum of 1,500 healthcare professional delegates attend the event, with 80% of delegates receiving funding via bursaries.

Each event will be endorsed and delivered in partnership with the relevant regional supporting society members of the WUWHS. Additional associations and societies across each continent will also be invited to participate in and support the relevant regional congress.

As well as exhibition stand space, opportunities include a main stage Symposium, an interactive made-easy workshops, product masterclass sessions and tailored focus group meetings.
